Learning Assessment Skill Recognition

Learning Arrangements

You can complete your qualification through a combination of independent learning and classroom training, or completely on-the-job with workplace visits from our Facilitators/Assessors. You will be provided with comprehensive learning resources and professional support and advice.

During the enrolment process, students will go through their training and assessment arrangements in detail, including what units must be completed through classroom training and what can be done as self-paced, independent learning.

After completing all learning and assessment tasks you are required to return your completed materials to your TR7 Facilitator/Assessor for review and assessment.

Assessment

All assessments are competency based. The type of assessment tasks may include practical demonstration, knowledge based test, portfolio of evidence and direct observation. To receive a Statement of Attainment for individual units you must successfully complete all the relevant assessment tasks. To obtain the qualification Certificate III in Occupational Health and Safety (BSB30707) you must successfully complete all 12 units and accompanying assessments.

Skills Recognition

The process of Skills Recognition (Recognition of Prior Learning and/or Recognition of Current Competencies) gives those people with the relevant experience the opportunity to gain formal recognition for their competencies (skills and knowledge) gained through life, work and study, regardless of where, when and how they were achieved.

Participants are responsible for gathering evidence that will show they have the required competencies to the standard set out by the industry in the National Competency Standards.
